

...august 3, 2018...

why do you drink? why do you drink? he asked the question to make her think – he asked the question to make her small until she wasn't there at all – and so she said –

i drink to be happy – implying i'm not but don't want to look beneath the mask to face the brewing fears and thoughts always saying i'm not enough –

i drink to be free – implying i'm not while inside fears are my bars and locks – i drink to be free and drink to forget that i am always free to punish myself – i drink to forget a little of this – i drink to forget a little of that – but i don't know what i need forget because i somewhere forgot to check –

he asked the question to make her think as she quickened her thinking and slowed the drink – then laughed as she said a soft goodbye to the walls and ceilings he judged her by.

> ©pamela swanson www.poetpam.com